OMF LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE FOR DSST PUBLIC SCHOOLS

(Denver, CO) August 2015 The Open Media Foundation (OMF) Web Development team recently completed and launched an impressive new website for the Denver School of Science and Technology (DSST).

Considered one of the best open-enrollment Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math (STEM) schools in the country, DSST Public Schools boast the highest performance and secondary school growth rate in Denver Public Schools. The organization is highly value driven and operates by six core values that are embedded in every part of their program; respect, responsibility, integrity, courage, curiosity, and doing your best.

Over the past couple months, OMF has collaborated with DSST in creating an effective and aesthetic website that highlights all of these aspects. Based on the collective project goals, the site tells the story, core values, and accomplishments of their unique school system while also acting as an easy to use platform for parents, teachers, alumni and board members.

In addition to the outcome of the project being a new website, a strong partnership has developed between the two organizations. "Open Media [staff] is extremely collaborative because they work solely with non-profit organizations. They worked hard to understand our organization, our culture and our mission which allowed them to bring the core of who we are to life in the design of our website," says Andy Mendrop, Manager of Communications for DSST

Public Schools, “Conveying our mission and our values was their primary focus throughout the entire project.”
