

Welcome our newest radio intern!

"My name is Ryan Sottosanti and I am an intern at Denver Open Media Radio. I have a passion for music, as I enjoy playing the guitar and bass. I also listen to various genres of music, mainly rock and hip-hop. I have also taken classes at Metropolitan State University of Denver, which include Basic Video Editing, Intro to Media, and Journalism Fundamentals. I can see myself working in this career field in the future, as I have learned many things, like how to speak outros for songs and how to edit recordings."

City of Cortez, CO on Open.Media

In 1886, the town was built to provide housing for the men working on the tunnels and irrigation ditches required to divert water out of the Dolores River and into Montezuma Valley. The town was named for Spanish conquistador Hernán Cortés.

It is a popular stop for tourists, who stay there because of its central location among surrounding attractions, such as Mesa Verde National Park, Monument Valley, and the Four Corners.

Live streams of City Council meetings are available at City of Cortez on Open Media
